Essay:

It is 100 degrees and you are looking up at a man with a Winchester rifle pointed at you. You have been without water for the last day and you are barely able to get around. The next thing you know, he is shooting at you. This is a little part of my favorite book Mojave Crossing by Louis L'Amour. The reason I really like this book is that it is about the western days like the 1870's and when people carried around guns and that was their life. The "cowboy" era is my favorite in history with the cowboy and Indians fights and gunfights it just gets me excited and makes me want to be there myself.
