Megan Dixon has a long-standing interest in literature and international places. She lived in Perth, Australia, during high school, and over the years has visited Hong Kong, Singapore, Shanghai, Beijing, London, Rome, Athens, Paris, Warsaw, Moscow, St. Petersburg, Kazakhstan and Georgia. She speaks Russian fluently and also speaks some French and Polish. Megan holds advanced degrees in Russian literature and cultural geography, and enjoys reading novels in between "work" reading. Her current favorite authors are the Turkish writer Orhan Pamuk and American Toni Morrison, but she has recently discovered V.S. Naipaul. Megan has lived in Caldwell for about 16 months and teaches part time at College of Idaho. She enjoys gardening and sewing in her spare time, and loves summer hiking trips with her husband.
