Michael Corrigan is retired from Idaho State University in Pocatello, Idaho. Born and raised in San Francisco, he wrote a hybrid memoir called Confessions of a Shanty Irishman, which was well reviewed in the San Francisco Chronicle. Michael has an MA from San Francisco State in English with a concentration in creative writing. His other published books include a grief journal, A Year and a Day, and These Precious Hours, a collection of connected stories. He has written many nonfiction and fiction works on the Irish American experience.